Dear Mr. Casey:

I wish to extend to you an invitation to meet for lunch with the Editorial Board of The Washington Times.

The Times, as you no doubt know, has in its first five and a half months of publication since last May 17, not only gained a paid circulation of over 100,000, but has also been privileged to host eight Cabinet secretaries, President Marcos of the Philippines, and other important figures in the public and private sector.

If it happens that you cannot fit a luncheon into your busy schedule, please let us know what other arrangements can be made and I'm sure we can be accommodating.

Thank you for your consideration. I look forward to hearing from you or, in my absence, please contact my Executive Assistant, Jonathan Slevin.

Sincerely

STAT
